1 Introduction

The following inventory provides a preliminary list of built heritage within the Western Bay of Plenty district. It identifies places currently scheduled in the District Plan and places which have been registered by the New Zealand Historic Places Trust. It also identifies places of built heritage value which have not yet been recognised in either schedule.

The study area identified for this inventory is limited to the current commercial areas of Te Puke and Katikati and the townships of Waihi Beach and Maketu. A number of other important places within the urban environs of Te Puke and Katikati have been included. In addition to these, significant places in other areas directly associated with the study areas have been included. A basic record form has been prepared for each item listed in the inventory, providing preliminary physical and historic data and a brief assessment of heritage significance using the criteria specified in the Resource Management Act 1991 and Environment Bay of Plenty Regional Policy Statement 2005.

This inventory has been developed using a thematic survey approach. The main advantage of a theme-based methodology is that it focuses on relationships between buildings, events and people over a larger area than might be covered in an area based survey. This helps prevent excessive focus on a particular building type, period or event and also provides useful contextual information for defining the heritage significance of a place.

The thematic contexts identified for the study were:

- Early Settlement: Sites associated with early settlement of the district.
- Residence: Residences associated with notable people, events or architectural styles.
- Industrial: General industrial sites, including mining, forestry and manufacturing.
- Agricultural: Sites associated with agricultural and horticultural developments in the district
- Commercial: Sites associated the development of commerce in the district.
- Transport: Sites associated with the development of transportation in the district
- Civic/Admin: Sites associated with local government or public amenities
- Health: Sites associated with the development of health care in the district.
- Education: Sites associated with the development of education in the district.
- Religion: Sites with religious associations (e.g. churches, church halls, vicarages).
- Recreation: Sites associated with recreation activities or sports.
- Community: Sites associated with community groups, clubs and societies
- Memorials: Memorial sites, commemorating people, events or places.

In evaluating the information provided through community consultation and the research, care was taken to ensure that a representative selection of all the identified themes was included. The spread of items within each theme was then reviewed to determine the representativeness and significance weighting of individual items.

In addition to the individual identification of places of historic heritage significance in the inventory, groups of places or buildings which contribute to the collective heritage character of the study areas have also been identified. These have been identified in the inventory as “landscapes”, “streetscapes” and “precincts” (groups of buildings). Not all items within each grouping are individually as significant as identified key places, but collectively they represent significant intact heritage areas. Record forms have been prepared for these groupings, identifying both key sites, which are also individually discussed, and additional supporting sites that do not feature elsewhere in the inventory.

As a result of information collected during community consultation and preliminary research, a large number of significant built heritage items were identified within the Western Bay of Plenty district but outside of the study areas. As the recognition of these items was of relevance to the thematic approach used in this study, a list of these sites has been included in the inventory. This list will form a useful basis for further research into the built heritage of the wider district.

The inventory is not a comprehensive list of historic heritage in the Western Bay of Plenty District and reflects only those sites that have been identified through community inputs or in preliminary historic research. Archaeological sites, sites of cultural significance, waahi tapu and marae buildings were not included in the brief for this project and do not feature in this inventory except where built heritage significance have been demonstrated. These sites will be dealt with in more detail in future inventory work.

This inventory, along with the accompanying analysis report (Part 1) will assist the Western Bay of Plenty District Council in undertaking its review of the Operative District Plan in light of recent changes to the Resource Management Act 1991, Local Government Act 2002, the Building Act 2004, and the Environmental Bay of Plenty Regional Policy Statement.
