If you need to evacuate in a hurry, take your essential supplies in a grab bag.

Grab bags

Water for three days or more
(at least 9 litres of water for every person).

Food that doesn't need cooking
(unless you have a camping stove or gas barbecue).

Toilet paper and large plastic buckets for an emergency toilet.

BBQ or gas stove to cook on

In an emergency, you may be stuck at home for three days or more. Work out what supplies you need for your household. Don't forget pets and those with medical and dietary needs.

Community emergency hubs

A community emergency hub is a place where you and your neighbours can go to help each other in a major emergency. There are hubs across the Western Bay of Plenty District. They are located at community facilities and can be opened by keyholders living in the local area.

In a major emergency, official responders will need to prioritise the most urgent issues, so it is likely that for the first few days you will need to help each other within your local community. The hub is a designated place where you can gather, connect with one another and solve problems using the skills and resources which already exist among your community.

Resources available at the community emergency hub

The hub is run by people like you in your local community without official assistance. Each hub has a guide for how to coordinate the sharing of information, skills and resources that exist in your community.

There are no supplies, food, water or blankets stored at hubs. Our communities are full of beds with blankets on them and pantries with food in them to get through the first few days after an emergency. Your community can gather the things it needs at the time by working together.

The Hub has a basic start-up kit which includes an AM/FM radio, some local maps. In a location either within the hub or near to the hub is access to a Civil Defence VHF radio that allows communication with the wider official response if phone lines are not working.

People working at the Hub have no legal powers to take resources from anyone, or force anyone to do anything. All laws still apply in an emergency.
