We often get asked questions about penalties that can be charged if people fail to pay their rates. Penalty payments can be avoided as long as you stick to the payment dates for your first and second rates instalment.

It’s important to note that unlike the ‘calendar’ year that runs from 1 January to 31 December, the New Zealand rating year runs from 1 July to 30 June. Here’s a timeline that shows key dates in the rates calendar. Check out the ‘Key things to remember’ section under the timeline if you need some more pointers.

Key things to remember:

Discount and penalty dates
- Pay in full by the 27 September 2019 discount date and receive 3% off your rates.
- To avoid a 10% late payment penalty you need to pay your first rates instalment before 25 October 2019. For the second rates instalment you need to pay by 20 March 2020 to avoid a 10% late payment penalty.

Payment options and how they relate to penalty dates - Direct Debit (monthly/six monthly/annually)
- Direct Debits can only start when your account is up to date.
- If you’re paying monthly it’s best to start in April or October to minimise the monthly payment amounts.
- This is a sound medium to long term option as all you need to do is have the available funds in your account.

Automatic payments
- These types of payments are usually a short term option.
- Automatic payments need to be managed carefully as you’re responsible for ensuring the correct amount is paid before the penalty date.
