REVIEWING OUR ALCOHOL CONTROL BYLAW 2016

Decisions Document

Thank you for taking part in the review of our Alcohol Control Bylaw. We're pleased to report this review is now complete, and the results will come into effect on 1 November 2016.

This document contains the outcomes of the review, why we made these decisions, and updated maps. Thanks again!

WHAT'S THE STORY?

In December 2015 we received a recommendation from the Te Puke Community Board and the local Police for Council to introduce an alcohol ban in the Te Puke township.

This recommendation was based on a perception that the consumption of alcohol in public places is leading to anti-social behaviour in Te Puke's town centre.

We agreed to consider an alcohol ban in Te Puke as part of a full review of the current Liquor Control Bylaw, which included reconsidering the current alcohol bans currently in place in Waihi Beach and Katikati.

For each township, we considered a range of options for the timing and area that each proposed ban should apply.

GETTING FEEDBACK

To find out what our communities thought of Council's proposed options, we opened an online feedback site to allow people to share their experiences on alcohol-related crime and disorder, whether a ban was needed in their town.

After considering evidence from the Police and feedback from our communities, Council was satisfied there was a high level of alcohol-related crime and disorder in Te Puke, and that a high level of alcohol-related crime and disorder would likely arise in Katikati and Waihi Beach if the current bans were withdrawn.

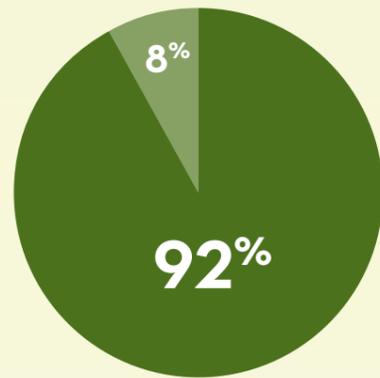

The draft bylaw was released for feedback from 13 April to 13 May. This proposed 24/7 alcohol bans year round in Te Puke, Waihi Beach and Katikati. We received written feedback from 26 people, and spoke with 83 people in person in the town centres during this time. Overall feedback suggested we had got it right.

As a result we have retained the alcohol bans in Te Puke, Katikati and Waihi Beach to effectively manage alcohol related issues in public places, as proposed in our draft bylaw. The new Alcohol Control Bylaw 2016 was adopted on 25 August 2016. It comes into effect on 1 November 2016.
